

LITTLE THINGS THAT COUNT

New Handbags for Day and Evening
—Smart indeed is the New York "Modish" of soft silk—Veils Attach Themselves to Handbags—Collars May Be Low in Front, High They Must Be at the Back—Ostrich Caps and Scarves for Evening Use.

Two typical examples of the new season are pictured for your selection. One is the very latest model of leather shopping bags, a quantity affair of blue saffiano leather, strapped like a silk bag and mounted with a wire frame of ostrich skins.

Ostrich Caps and Scarves.
For evening wear, especially for the upper classes, nothing can possess greater beauty with a touch of ostrich plumes mounted on sticks or wires made of sheer silk. The tips that curl back from the throat, and square capes of ostrich and marabou that cover the shoulder but leave the throat and face free.

High Collars Most Modish.
The new fads show higher collars, made of velvet or fur, in shades of brown, emerald and grey, the high collar of blue or white being the favorite. The women who are comfortably worn in though this bit of New French wear has simple, classical plaided designs. The plaided ribbons are often attached all around the edges with new stitching and the tiny patterns set in around the ends of the ribbons, patterning them workroom.

tall collar should do so now, for these collars are much the smartest sort.

The very smartest blouses now extend over the waistline—if only by an inch or two. But over-the-waistline very chic; so are pearl gray gloves stitched with white.
